

Bridal Frequently Asked Questions

Is a bridal trial required?

Yes, I do require it for all brides, if your bridesmaids want one too that is totally cool with me. You'll feel prepared and relaxed on your big day knowing you'll love your look.

How much is a bridal trial?

The trial run for hair is $75 and if you're doing makeup too with me its $75 for that also. So a bride may be looking at $150 for trial run.

What should I bring to my bridal trial?

Please bring all your accessories, including jewelry and your veil so that you can get the full picture. If you are planning to wear a fresh flower crown, I will have a faux flower one you can try on.

Can I bring someone with me to my bridal trial?

Our friends and family are our biggest supporters however my studio is small So, I recommend coming alone or only having one person with you. Don't worry, we'll take plenty of pictures so you can show everyone.

Can I schedule a bridal trial before I book my wedding day?

Of course! Your wedding day beauty is an important investment and a trial ensures we're a good fit. I recommend booking your trial at least 3 months before your wedding if you don't have a contract in place. This will ensure availability of all the artists you're trying and is especially true if your wedding falls in the prime months of May, June, September or October.

Choosing on-location services for your wedding day?

My team and I will arrive 15 minutes before our scheduled start time to get setup. Our beauty kits are stocked with the best tools and products to create your dream look.
